

0_Week - Code Attributions

Sunday, June 25, 2017 10:43 AM

Attribution code requirements:

The courses text book does not require attribution; but, it is encouraged and appreciated. Reusing open source code or code snippets from a third-party resource is encouraged and often seen as a positive contribution to the open source community; however, without proper attribution the application may be in violation of copyright or plagiarism laws. To this end, all programming assignments, regardless of authorship, must include the following:

```
/*
=====
; Title: Assignment 1.4
; Author: Professor Krasso
; Date: 25 June 2017
; Modified By: <Your name>
; Description: This program demonstrates the
; use of JavaScript types, values, and
; and variables in an application.
;=====
*/
```

Title: <title of program>

Author: <original author(s)>

Date: <today's date in the following format: DD Month YYYY>

Modified By: <If were not the original author, your name would go here>

Description: <One or two sentences describing the programs functionality>
